School board narrows search for new superintendent

■ Road trip last week was apparently used for vetting of Southern California school district official

The school board of the Washington Unified School District took a field trip last week to the offices of the San Bernardino Unified School District for a "site visit" and interviews connected to a finalist in the search for a new WUSD superintendent.

While WUSD isn't saying who that finalist is, the News-Ledger has learned that the candidate is Dr. Dayton Gilleland, an assistant superintendent at the San Bernardino district.

When reached by phone yesterday, Gilleland declined to comment about a possible job offer in West Sacramento.

David Westin, president of WUSD's school board, would not confirm the identity of the person at the top of the district's list, but said "I'm working with our legal counsel, the interim superintendent and our consultant to get an agreement." Westin said he is personally involved with the drafting of the employment contract for a new superintendent.

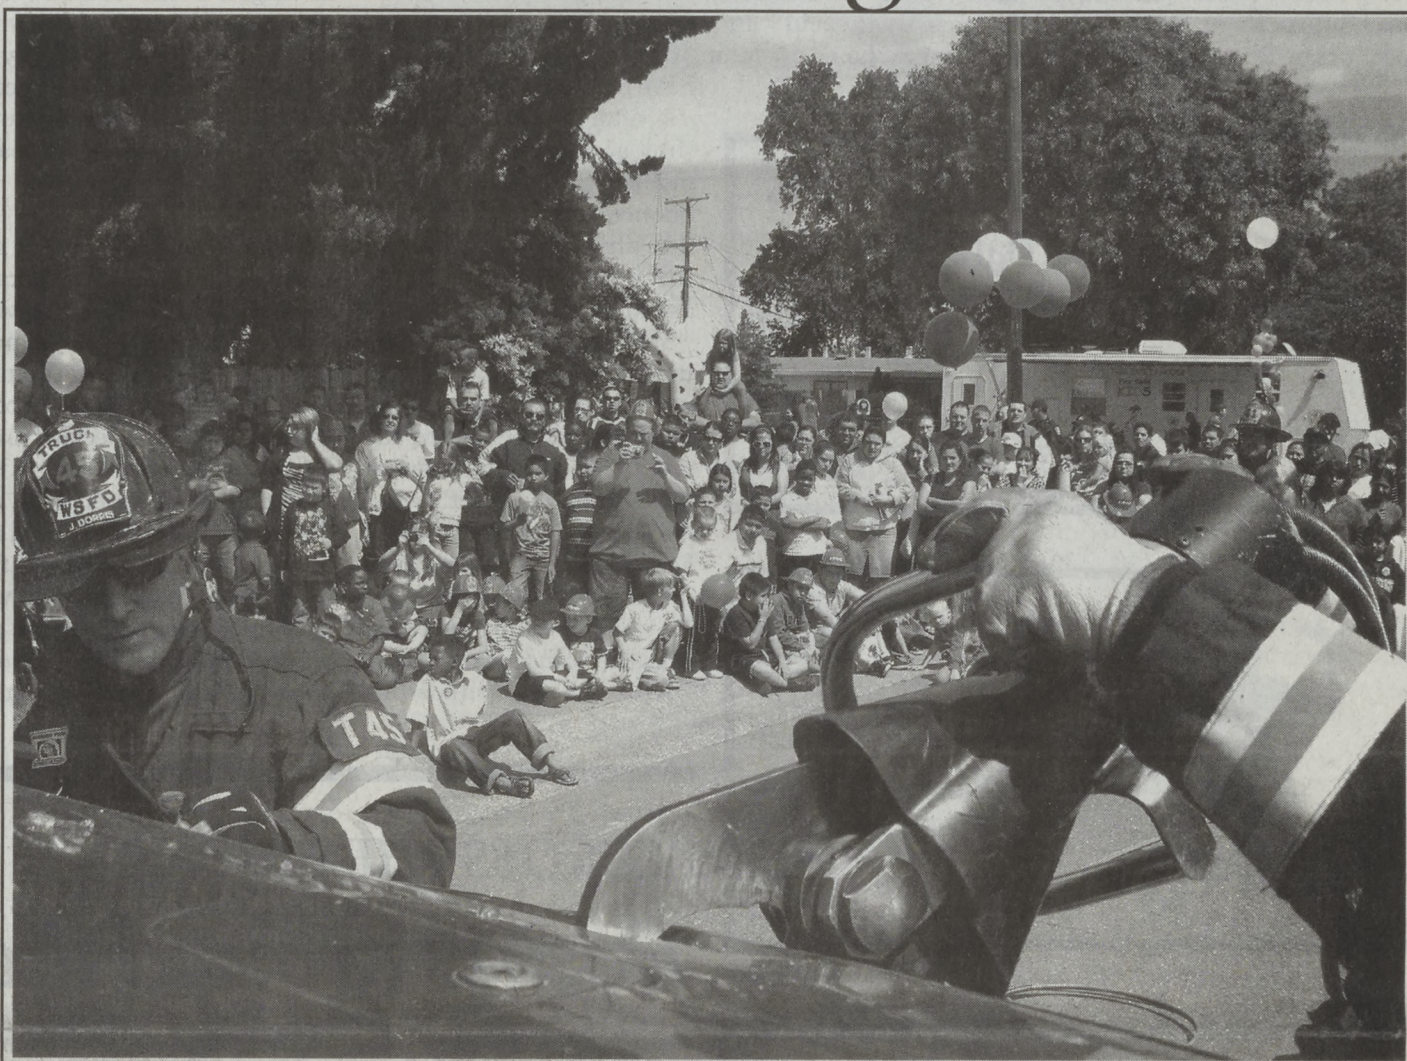

He stressed that WUSD has not made a final decision on whom to hire, and said there is more than one person still under consideration. The board will discuss the question again this Thursday, but is not expected to announce a choice before next week.

"We believe the people we're in negotiation with will be able to take the district to a new level," said Westin. "They're very experienced and would be a tremendous upgrade over whatever we've had as superintendent in this district before."

Gilleland's district is larger than Washington Unified. The San Bernardino district describes itself as the "eighth largest in California," with nearly 55,000 students, according to its website. Gilleland duties include presiding over "student services" and "educational support services."

Fire department officials estimate that nearly 1,000 people visited Station 44 on Fremont Boulevard for its annual "open house" on May 22.

The guests went through almost 2,000 hot dogs, donated by Tony's Fine Foods of West Sacramento.

They saw a demonstration of the "jaws of life" extraction equipment, and eight kids were lucky winners of bicycles donated by Target, WalMart, the West Sacramento Firefighters Association and 1-800 Board Up.

The department expects to host another open house in October - this time at Station 45 in Southport.

Indian Heritage Center Design: Public asked to help choose between different plans

Officials from the state parks department invite you to comment on several different plans for the layout of the new California Indian Heritage Center on West Sacramento's northern riverfront. The parks department is closing in on the choice of a "preferred alternative" for the layout of the museum and its outdoor exhibits.

The plans show different alternatives for ingress and egress to the site, as well as parking and building layouts. Some of the plans call for acquisition of nearby property.

The California Indian Heritage Center will be located on land near the Sacramento River and near Fountain Drive and Lighthouse Drive.

The site was at one time slated to contain a marina and become part of the housing project now known as "The Rivers." Then, after being acquired by the city, the property was put forth as one possible site of a new California governor's residence - but the state backed away from plans to build a new governor's residence.

Later, the city agreed to donate the 43-acre property to the state for use as an Indian museum and heritage center.

A meeting to discuss the different land use alternatives will be held from 5:30-7:30 p.m. on June 10 at city hall, 1110 West Capitol Avenue. The meeting is part of the environmental review process for the center.

For more information, visit www.cihc.parks.ca.gov.

Correction/clarification: Johannessen explains plan for savings to city

Last week's article on the city council's budget cut deliberations may not have accurately reflected a proposal by City Councilman Mark Johannessen.

The article stated that Johannessen wanted to save money in the long term through several measures. One suggestion was to switch providers of police and fire dispatch services from Yolo County to the City of Sacramento, which he said may produce savings.

The article noted that the other councilmembers "disagreed," without specifying which portion of the proposal they disagreed with. The article did note that Mayor Cabaldon agreed it was worthwhile to look at Johannessen's money-saving ideas, while opposing a plan to "deficit spend."

After the article was published, Johannessen commented in an email to the News-Ledger:

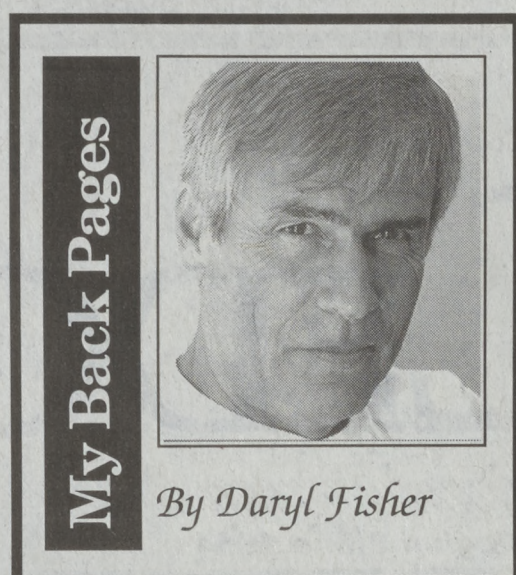

"Essentially, I proposed backing off around $900,000 in specific cuts centered around health and safety and I presented a plan on how to pay for that proposal. Specifically, I requested that staff look into 1) how we use fire and police dispatch, and 2) what moving toward an in house city attorney would look like in terms of cost savings to the city. The combination of just those two items could potentially save the city hundreds of thousands of dollars a year and allow us to maintain our level of service in certain areas of fire and police protection. I requested those items be studied by city staff and brought back to council before the final decision. None of the rest of this council disagreed with this request."

All's well that ends well

Last week, my 89-year old mother came up with what seemed to be a simple enough request. She asked me if I could please find a nice new home for her two pet parakeets, which she has had for over five years now.

"But why would you want me to do that?" I asked her with interest, knowing that she has enjoyed having them around since my brother bought them for her shortly after my father died, the hope being that they would keep her company and brighten her days a bit with their interesting antics and pretty singing.

"Well," she said, "to tell you the truth, it's just getting to be too much trouble for me to properly take care of them. When they eat or take a bath, they get their food and their water and their feathers all over the place, and I'm not so good anymore at bending down and cleaning up after them. Plus I think I may be a little allergic to them, and I just think it's time to give them to someone who can spend more time with them and take better care of them. I was going to have your brother take them, and he would if it wasn't for his cats. But as you know, birds get very stressed around cats, so that wouldn't work. Plus I know you and your sister aren't interested in having indoor pets anymore, so I was thinking you could maybe advertise them in your paper, you know, free to a good home, including their cage and all the food I have for them of course."

So, after agreeing to try and find a new home for my mother's parakeets, I quickly phoned my daughter, who has always loved all creatures great and small, and asked for her advice.

"Why don't I just put them up on Craigslist and I'm sure we'll have a dozen people wanting them before the day is out," my daughter assured me. And that is exactly what happened. But the nature of some of the responses quickly worried my daughter and she called me to express her concerns.

"This one guy sounds like he wants them to feed to his snakes," said my daughter, obviously worried. "But there is a lady up in Placerville who seems nice, and she really wants them. And there's also a lady in Folsom who says she has lots of parakeets and she wrote that she would love to have them. And I got about six other responses, too. So what do you think?"

"Well," I said, not particularly wanting to load up a couple of nervous parakeets and their giant cage in the back of my truck for a bumpy ride all the way to Folsom or Placerville, "didn't anyone respond who lives a little closer to Wes Sac?"

"Yeah, the guy who wants to feed them to his snakes lives right across the river!"

"Anyone other than him?"

"Well, come to think of it, I think someone did leave a local number. Let me look through all the responses again and then I'll get back to you, okay?"

And sure enough, a really sweet lady who lives not far too from where I grew up on Michigan Boulevard in West Sacramento was indeed interested in giving my mother's two pretty parakeets a happy new home. And when I called her to say she could have them, I could hear the excitement in her voice. Plus she seemed very knowledgeable about parakeets and all their needs.

So off I went to get my mother's birds, loaded them and all their paraphernalia into the back of my truck, and was soon greeted with a big smile by their new owner. And not only did she like them, but since my mother had never gotten around to naming the parakeets, she decided to call them Storm and Cloud before I even got them unloaded. Unfortunately, when I did reach the front door with birds in one hand and a big bag of bird seed in the other, the first thing I noticed inside the house was two very big cats, looking over at me and the parakeets with way too much interest. And although I really wanted the nice lady to have my mother's birds, all I could think of was those Sylvester the Cat and Tweetie Bird cartoons of my youth, where poor Tweetie was always on Sylvester's dinner menu.

"I'm really sorry," I reluctantly said to the nice lady, "but I guess I forgot to ask you if you had cats." And although she assured me they were very nice and mellow cats, we finally agreed that it would probably be best if I kept looking for a cat-free home for Storm and Cloud.

"So now what do I do?" I asked my daughter when she came over to my house with her two young boys to see how the parakeets and I were doing.

"Mommy," suddenly shouted my five year old grandson with glee as soon as he saw the parakeets, "I love these birds!"

"Me, too!" said his smiling younger brother, as they both ran over to the parakeets and pushed their noses as close to the bird cage as they could possibly get them.

"Well," said my daughter with a big smile, "something tells me grandma's parakeets have just found their new home!"

SPORTS INSIDER

By Rich Novoa

The 2010 NBA Playoffs are set to tip-off on Thursday in Los Angeles with the Lakers looking for back-to-back titles against the NBA champions of 2008, the Boston Celtics. These two teams split their season series, with each winning by a single point on the other's home court.

This is the fourth time in the 64-year history of the NBA Finals that the champions of the last two years are facing each other. The Lakers are looking for some revenge for 2008, while the Celtics want to take back the title to Boston. Now that we have played 1,305 games over the course of seven months, there are only two teams standing with the Cavs, Magic, and Suns folding up like lawn chairs.

The Celtics' are on their 21st trip to the Finals, while the Lakers have been to the finals 31 times in their franchise history. Los Angeles has made 10 more trips to the Finals but Boston has two more titles and they've won nine of the 11 previous head-to-head matchups with the Lakers.

In many ways, this series is all about NBA history because these two teams have met 12 times in the NBA finals so just sit back and enjoy a great series featuring Kobe Bryant leading a solid front line of big guys against the aggressive defense of Boston lead by Paul Pierce and Kevin Garnett.

The Lakers will have Andrew Bynum back in the line-up at center to help Pau Gasol grab some rebounds and with Ron-Ron Artest guarding Paul Pierce and veteran point guard Derek Fisher leading the offensive the Lakers are odds-on-favorite to win the title.

Meanwhile, the Celtics are playing inspired basketball with Ray Allen, Kevin Garnett and Paul Pierce providing championship experience on the floor but the key to the Celtics success will come from Rasheed Wallace, whose job will be to harass either Gasol or Bynum under the boards or maybe to create some anxiety for younger Bynum.

So what does that mean? Will Kobe grab his fifth championship ring or will the Celtics hang their 18th title banner from the rafters? I've got to believe good defensive wins most games plus I'm not a great fan of the Lakers, so I'm taking the Celtics in seven games!

Diamond Notes

The Giants (27-23) management must have read my column last week because they went down to Fresno and pick-up rookie catcher Buster Posey and inserted him in their anemic batting order and then signed free agent Pat Burrell and assigned the 33-year-old outfielder to Fresno to sharpen his eye at the plate.

Posey was an instant hit moving to first base and going 6 for 9 in two games and batting sixth in the line-up that scored 18 runs and pounded out 31 hits against Arizona. Burrell was released by Tampa Bay on May 22 after beginning the season hitting .202 with two home runs and 13 RBIs in 24 games, all as designated hitter. The Giants want to use Burrell as right-handed pinch hitter to give them some punch off the bench. He is a .253 lifetime hitter with 267 career home runs and 904 RBIs.

The A's (27-24) are still hanging on to first place just one game ahead of the Texas Rangers as they head to Boston for a three game series. The A's took three out of four games from Detroit but lost two of three games in Baltimore.

The A's return home on Friday night for three games against Minnesota and a four game set against the Angels starting on Monday. The Giants will be home for a couple games against the Rockies before they head to Pittsburgh on Friday night (4:00 p.m.) for three games and then it's on to Cincinnati see Dusty Baker and his Reds for a four game series.

I always wondered why a baseball teams celebrate a player's success by having the whole team jump all over the player. You think someone might get hurt in all the fun at home plate or on the pitcher's mound. Well, I finally I witness the consequences of such team chemistry. The Los Angeles Angels helped Kendry Morales celebrate his walk off home run that ended with Morales breaking his leg at home plate. It was brilliant move by the Angels and wonderful mob celebration except that Morales will be out for five weeks to recover from his fracture.

River Cats

The River Cats (25-27) are riding a six-game winning streak out scoring their opponents 45-19 as they prepare to return home on Tuesday night (game time is 7:05 p.m.) to open a four-game series with the Tacoma Rainiers.

The Oakland A's signed Matt Watson to a minor-league contract and assigned the 31-year-old outfielder to the Sacramento River Cats. Watson, a 10-year minor league veteran, played in 270 games for the River Cats from 2004 to 2006, hitting .310 with 41 home runs and 205 runs batted in. He hit .305 with 19 home runs and drove in 96 runs in 2004. A year later, he hit .317 with 17 home runs and 81 RBIs and had a .404 on-base percentage.

Watson was only three games into his second stint with Sacramento when he smashed two home runs Monday afternoon to help lift the River Cats past the host Reno Aces in an 11-8 win. Watson, who led the comeback from behind victory is now batting .529 (9-for-17) in his four games with Sacramento (all against Reno), with three doubles, two home runs, five runs and six RBIs.

It was a great turn of events for Watson, who was playing with the Lancaster Barnstormers of the Independent Atlantic League, and now he is leading a hit parade with multiple hits in three of the four games he's played for Sacramento but he has his sights set for Oakland.

Major League Soccer

With the 2010 FIFA World Cup just 8 days away the River Cats management has decided to bring Major League Soccer to West Sacramento. Local fans will be able to take in some MLS action right in their own backyard as part of the inaugural Sacramento Cup soccer match.

The San Jose Earthquakes and Raley Field announced that the Earthquakes will host Chivas USA on Saturday, June 12 in a Major League Soccer exhibition match at Raley Field in West Sacramento, at 7 p.m. Tickets for the match are now on sale to the general public with ticket prices starting at just $25 up to $35. Fans can purchase tickets by visiting the Raley Field Ticket Office, raleyfield.com or ticketmaster.com.

At the local level, my Futbol Club, the Sacramento Gold will be hosting the 2009 NPSSL defending Champion Sonoma County Sol on Sunday, June 6th - 5:00 p.m. at River City High School. Tickets prices are $5 for adults and youth tickets are just $2 (kids under 6 free). Go for the GOLD.

GUEST COMMENTARY:

Invasive moth species poses threat to vineyards

From Beth Gabor
County of Yolo

Yolo County has had a long-standing commitment to the preservation of agriculture. This is most evident in the fact that over 97% of Yolo County's unincorporated land is designated for agricultural use. Grapes are a rising star in Yolo County agriculture, with 13,500 acres harvested last year at a value of $50 million. In 2007, the Clarksburg area produced 7.0% of California's red grape acreage, and 4.2% of California's total grape acreage. In 2008, Yolo County's 12,000 acres of wine grapes produced 12.8 million gallons of wine, or over 5 million cases. The farmgate value was $42 million and the value-added at the winery another $564 million.

Unfortunately, the grape industry throughout California is threatened by the European Grapevine moth (EGVM). Native to Mediterranean Europe, the EGVM is particularly fond of grapes, but also enjoys olives, another increasingly important local crop. EGVM was reported for the first time in the United States in Napa Valley in late 2009. At that time, 23 properties were found to be infested. The pest caused extensive damage to the vineyards, with 100% crop loss and over $2 million in damage. Recently, the EGVM was found in Mendocino and Fresno counties.

Yolo County's Agriculture Department and Agricultural Commissioners across the state are working closely with the California Department of Food & Agriculture (CDFA) and the U.S. Department of Agriculture on an intensive statewide trapping effort to determine whether the moth has infested other areas of the state. CDFA inspectors are also working with growers, nurseries, landscapers and others who handle plants and fruit to guard against further spread of the pest by regulating the harvest, shipping and handling of affected crops and plants.

The EGVM larvae are responsible for the damage to grapes. Larvae that emerge early in the spring feed on grape bud clusters or flowers and spin webbing around them before pupating inside the web or under a rolled leaf. If heavy flower damage occurs during this first generation, the affected flowers fail to develop and yield is reduced. Second-generation larvae enter the grapes to feed before pupating inside the grape. Larvae of the third generation — the most damaging — feed on multiple ripening grapes and expose them to further damage from fungal development and rot.

"It is important to detect and eradicate EGVM infestations while the population is still small," said Yolo County Agricultural Commissioner John Young. "Grapes are ranked second among agricultural commodities in California and fourth in Yolo County. Establishment of this pest would be catastrophic to our vineyards."

Pest detection, exclusion and eradication are one of the many services the Yolo County Agriculture Department provides. Pest detection includes setting traps throughout the county for pests like the glassy winged sharpshooter, which also affects grapes, or the gypsy moth. Pest exclusion includes inspecting incoming plant material from trucks and other shipments, while eradication could include quarantining or spraying. These important programs protect Yolo County's $550 million agricultural industry and serve as a vital line of defense against the EGVM and other emerging threats.

Vote Yes on Prop 15: so that the registration fees paid to the state by licensed lobbyists, who thereby have special access to our government, can fund public financing of the election of the one state official whose job is to insure clean elections of all other public officials across the state.

If the campaign of the Secretary of State is unfairly financed, the integrity of all other elections is jeopardized.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Misappropriation of funds

Station 45 just missed the budget axe. Now they are having another Open House, with food, drinks, bounce houses, and banners being made up. This all costs money! Misappropriation of tax payer funds is what I call it. Someone needs to answer for this!

TIM HALL
West Sacramento

Pay your fair share

No one should be surprised by the governor's lack of support for a ballot initiative for an oil severance tax on California oil producers in 2010! California is the 3rd largest oil producing state in the country, yet it's oil producers don't pay any oil severance tax, or their fair share for doing business in the state. My fellow voters, compare this to states like Texas, Alaska, Louisiana and Oklahoma. These states all pay their fair share. Change is needed for those oil corporations doing business in California. Wake up California voters and let our voices be heard at the state capitol in 2010.

CHARLES SANO
West Sacramento

Not a 'person'

Mark Twain said, "The hardest thing in the world is to change the opinion of someone who is being paid to hold it." And yet democracy depends on every individual being free to speak his/ her conscience and to influence one another on the basis of reason. An ultimate protection of free speech is the privacy of the voting booth.

In 2010, in Citizens United, a corporation, v. Federal Election Commission, the U.S. Supreme Court, in a 5-4 decision, gave to corporations in funding political campaigns the precedent-shattering, extraordinary protection of constitutional free speech, which was designed instead to guard the precious inalienable rights of human individuals, who are created equal and endowed by their creator with infinite value. It was not designed for groups who file papers with the state to be created and incorporated by statute and shielded by statute from liability. Individuals are human, mortal, ultimately liable for their decisions, never too big to fail, and subject to their own consciences. Corporations are paid to hold their opinions, and to commercially advertise them. Now our individual human opinions are equal in value to a Coke or a Bud or a McBurger. Financially the corporations are more equal than any human individual. Please see LETTERS, p. 4
